Students in a Professional Organisation

Health Visitor Student, Punjab Health School, Amritsar.

hearted cooperation should be encouraged.

1. Be an Active Member.

   Students should be urged into regular attendance at the meetings of the unit. They should participate in debates, discussions, symposium, seminars, essay competitions, speech contests, games, competitions and so on. Students should pay their subscription to the SNA promptly, and learn to understand the value of maintaining membership.

2. Be a Learner.

   In the various activities of the unit, students should realise that they are learning through a different medium. They can learn best by doing. Students learn to develop their skills, ideas and talents in many ways. As students differ individually in their physical, mental, and emotional make-up, their participation in the professional organisation will help to correlate and co-ordinate each of their capacities and capabilities for the good of every one. Thus, student’s talents can be developed and their emotional and personality traits channelled in the right direction. Whole hearted cooperation and participation in the activities of the unit will help the character growth and development of students; it helps also to change the outlook from self-interest and selfishness to common interest and common good.

3. Be a Supporter.

   Students must support their own cause and try to achieve their ideals. As they differ in their individual make-up, they may find that they may not be able to participate in all of the planned activities, but can learn to give whole hearted support to others, and to make their own contribution in whatever way they can. It is necessary to develop our SNA so that it meets the needs of the members. This can be done by adapting our programmes in keeping with present day thinking, and also in line with TNAI.

   It is evident that a professional organisation is very necessary to students, and students should benefit by belonging to it, contributing to it, and developing from it, through a well organised and well planned programme of S.N.A. Unit activities.
